

The best things in life are free

Today's people are so materialistic and they are held by not really important objects. We spend a lot of time thinking about our image, expensive gadgets, futuristic furnishing of our houses, simply about money. We have to realize that our lives are formed from something more important. We must live more for love, for other people around us and appreciate what we have. Everybody who is alive owns the biggest fortune in space, their own life.

But modern society pressures people to do more work, to buy items that they do not need, which leads to inner dissatisfaction, blind pursuit of money. It is a curious system of our world. Because things like health, love and happiness we do not purchase in any shops and we often sell out our lives because of senseless treasure. Is it not stupid? After all, the best things in life are free.

I think that every human in the world should be wise up to the value of things, which we cannot buy. And together we can change the world. But everyone has to start in their own interior. And every day give a small gift to someone else. A smile suffices and a day becomes better. The world becomes better, I hope.

Jan Pecka (4.C, 2013-14)